A Word to Ladies.
We do not wish to advise ladies in general, for they are generally pretty well advised, but to those only who are not posted, would we propound the query: Why is it that the ladies of fashion and economy in both cities patronize the Dry Goods Establishment of Thompson & Gostinger, No. 116 Federal street, Allegheny? Because, 1st, they get the very latest and best style of goods to be had in the East or West, and 2d, they find many novelties in addition to what is usually kept in a first-class Dry Goods House, which are sold at a very small profit; in fact they are at present giving some remarkable bargains, which the senior member of the firm has just selected in New York, especially for their trade; and as they buy exclusively for cash, they are enabled to give some decided bargains. So, fair reader, if you desire a bargain, give them a call before the choicest has been sold. Remember the place, No. 116 Federal street, corner of Water, Allegheny.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

The President had an orderly introduction into our city last evening. A good many people were in the streets. The procession, taking out those clever fellows, the firemen, was a slim affair. There was little particularly noticeable about it, except the total omission of those things which evince popular affection, not to say respect. There were few flags of any kind,—as many calculated to remind Mr. JOHNSON of his faults as his virtues—few public buildings were illuminated, and they we believe were confined to the custom house and the two newspapers that support the President. In all Wood street, there was not a flag, nor an extra light, save over the St. Charles Hotel, the President's headquarters. The other parts of the city—part of Fifth street excepted—wore the usual appearance.

There was great significance in all this, as will be made known on the 9th day of October next.

Mr. JOHNSON was not successful before the crowd, which, having heard from Maine, was good natured, but altogether indisposed to listen to long speeches, or permit the occasion to bear the least resemblance to a Quaker meeting. There were cheers in plenty—plenty if less than usual—when GRANT and FARRAGUT were conspicuously the favorites. In fact, the President found himself laboring under great embarrassments—chief of which was the people did not wish to hear him out—hardly to begin. It was all in good humor, however, and the upshot was, the President did not swing half way round the circle, but retired without handing over the Constitution or the flag even once. Having got as far as "My Policy" objections were interposed, and not withdrawn—but His Excellency was.

General GRANT spoke a few words,—all sorts of calls were made; cheers were given for "GRANT," "FARRAGUT," "GEARY," "MOORHEAD," and now and then a groan for "OLD POLICY." After this had been kept up for some time, the crowd quietly dispersed, nine-tenths of them to engage, with renewed will, for the cause for which glorious Maine has set the ball rolling.

THE COMING CONVENTION—OUR DUTY.

We have already called attention to the importance of the Soldiers and Sailors' Convention, which meets here on the 25th inst., with reference to the influence it is calculated to exert in the present contest. The fact that the Convention has been called to meet in this city devolves a great duty upon our citizens, but not greater than they are able to perform. Although the Resident Committee in this county has worked with untiring vigor day and night in organizing the elements of the Convention and in preparing the countless number of details, it is evident that much is still undone and must remain undone, unless the people come forward immediately and promptly and aid in the work. It should be remembered that the Convention is not of a purely local character, but that it embraces every State, county and district where Union soldiers and sailors are to be found, and that of the millions of Boys in Blue in the nation, many thousands of them may be expected here to give expression to their views upon the momentous issues of the day.

Several days ago we made an urgent appeal to have a suitable building erected for the Convention, and we were glad to know that our views met with favor in the County Executive Committee, and that some action was taken in the matter; but since then we have not heard of anything being done towards having the building erected. We know that the members of the County Committee have much work to do yet; having power to add to their number, they should call to their assistance as many more of our citizens as may be necessary to make their work complete in all its parts. Our people we know to be thoroughly aroused to the overshadowing greatness of the issues involved, and are earnestly desirous that nothing should be omitted to imperil our cause, but having regularly appointed committees to manage the contest, it is but natural that they should look to them to perform the duties for which they were appointed. A wigwam capable of holding from ten to fifteen thousand persons should be commenced at once. It must not be said that the importance of such a gathering has been diminished by being through the failure of our people to supply proper accommodations. A hall that can accommodate but twenty-five hundred persons, cannot be made to hold four or six times that number. This is self-evident. If fifteen thousand soldiers gather here, and but a mere handful of them can get into the Convention, the blame will be ours. We must see to it that this is not the case.

Personal accommodations must also be supplied. The hotels will be filled to overflowing, and many strangers will be destitute of lodging if something is not done in the matter. The hospitality of our city is proverbial, and should be extended without limit on this important occasion. Those of our citizens who intend to aid in the various matters pertaining to the Convention should hunt up the committees and tender their assistance promptly, without waiting to be personally requested. The time is short, but yet long enough to accomplish all that is necessary, even all that duty requires. No Committee should wait upon another, but each should press forward in the prompt, energetic performance of its duty. No citizen should wait upon another, but every one interested in the cause should at once do what the great cause demands of him and all that the laws of hospitality require.

The soldiers and sailors of Allegheny county, we trust, and have no doubt will, rise equal to the occasion. Organizations in all the districts should be perfected without delay, and the instructions of the Resident Committee thoroughly carried out. Their comrades upon many a battle field, bivouac and march are coming, and should be handsomely welcomed. They should muster in force, perfectly organized, emblazed with the old esprit de corps, to receive and honor their gallant comrades. We urge this appeal upon our Committee, our citizens and our soldiers.

THE CATO OF THE REPUBLIC.

Mr. SEWARD, in his speech at Indianapolis, employs language which intimates to us that we have an excellent Consul and Dictator in the official whom we have been wont to recognize only as the constitutional President of the United States, and that we ought to be highly grateful for the privilege.

"I ask you what might not have been the fortune of Rome, if, instead of Julius Cæsar she had chosen Cato for Consul and Dictator? This is the privilege God has vouchsafed to us. Instead of having Jeff. Davis or some other revolutionary leader to preside over us at the close of so powerful a struggle, he has allowed us to have Andy Johnson, the Cato of our nation, at the head of our Government. Sustain him by your suffrage, that is all you can do."

Mr. SEWARD is a man of learning. But in this case, certainly, if he has read history aright, he has made an egregious mistake in reading men and character, and in comparing the one of his heroes with the other.

If we have read the history of the Roman CATO aright, he was, in a corrupt age, a man of uncompromising, austere morality, so much and so notoriously so, that wild young men were ashamed to be seen by him in their revelry, and made his approval a motive to restraint or their licentious action, saying to themselves, How would I act if the eyes of CATO were upon me?

In politics CATO consulted his own unambitious judgment and the good of the Republic by acting in concert with the Senate, and not in opposition to it.

In times of threatening conspiracy, CATO was not the advocate nor even the apologist of traitors. CATO was not satisfied with the bare temporary frustration of the plot of CATALINE. And when CESAR had almost persuaded the Senate to abstain from punishing the traitorous conspirators who had vainly attempted to destroy the Republic, CATO pleaded that treason was an odious crime and traitors should be punished, and pleaded so effectually as to secure their punishment, not as citizens but as enemies of the State.

When CICERO had nobly and successfully confronted the conspiracy, in his eloquent and patriotic orations, and overwhelmed them and their plots, and their confederates and their apologists in the Government, with the indignation of the Roman Congress and people, CATO did not pronounce that Congress and people traitors. CATO did not single out CICERO as a special object of his vituperation. No, the Roman CATO was the first to hail him as "the father of his country."

Mr. SEWARD'S history is correct, but his comparison is beyond conception absurd. But if Mr. JOHNSON embodied the stern moral integrity and the unambitious disposition, and the political soundness and wisdom of a dozen CATOS, the American people are not ready to receive him as our Consul nor our Dictator. He is Constitutional President of the United States, and with that office both he and Mr. SEWARD should be satisfied.

WHY WAS IT?

The President was brought over the Panhandle Road from Steubenville, (where the people were so rude as not to permit him to speak,) instead the old road. The difference is, the former is through a country where there are no villages, while on the latter there are half a dozen. Was it to keep the President from making a speech that this arrangement was made? If it was, it showed somebody's good sense.

General GRANT, by declining special honors, even from Boys in Blue, on the ground that he was with his "commander," clearly indicated that he was on duty, and that his connection with the Presidential tour had that and only that significance. Whenever General GRANT is placed on duty, no personal considerations have any weight with him. Being on duty with the President, he could not seem to accept an ovation such as was intended for him in Cincinnati. In the line of duty he went and remains with the President. Probably it is about the most irksome duty he ever performed.

Secretary SEWARD, we regret to hear, was quite ill throughout yesterday, and unable to accompany the President through our city, and to the disappointment of very many, he was prevented by sickness from attending the banquet. It was the belief, however, that he would be quite restored to-day.

The New York News wants ANDREW JOHNSON to "stop talking and strike a bee line for Washington." For our part, though it would be bad for our National reputation, we would prefer to have him continue to speak, as he has been speaking for the last ten days, three weeks longer.

The New York Times has not a single word to utter concerning the Maine election. It gives the returns, seemingly in pretty much the frame of mind a condemned criminal listens to the reading of his death warrant.

We understand that the Postmaster at Greenville, Ohio, a one-armed soldier, has been removed and a Copperhead appointed in his place. All right! If it is not, it will be made right in October!

It is rumored that Minister BIGELOW will shortly be recalled from Paris, and HENRY J. RAYMOND appointed to be his successor.

To the Editor of the PittsburghCommercial:

Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, before he left Washington on his western tour, but since simply Andrew Johnson, as he avers, having left his dignity behind him, in his speech at Columbus, Ohio, on the 12th, tried his hand at allegory, thus: "If I could put all the members of Congress who make Andrew Johnson their text, into one man, I would," &c., reminds me of a saying of an old and, during his life, a much loved citizen, Hon. Walter Forward. In a private gathering one evening, it came to his turn to amuse the assembly; he, in the full possession of the known imperturbability of his nature, arose and said: "Friends, suppose that all the oceans, seas, lakes and rivers made one great ocean; again, that all the mountains and hills made one great mountain; further, that all the trees made one big tree; that all men made one big man; that all axes made one big axe—what do you believe would be the effect, should this great mountain be placed in the great ocean, the big tree growing on the top of the great mountain, if the big man would take the big axe and cut down the big tree, and it should fall into the great ocean?" The company, after trying to guess for some time, "gave it up." Mr. Forward quaintly said: "Don't you think it would make a thundering splash, and nothing more?

POLITICAL.

The Post publishes a letter from a disabled rebel officer in Pontiac, Miss., which says that, having learned to hate the falsities for which he fought, declares that the bitterness and violence in the South is the result of the President's truckling policy.

The Democratic papers throughout the country prompted by the authorities, are ascertaining that the Bounty bill passed by Congress contains no appropriation. It should be known that the Bounty bill forms a clause in a general appropriation bill, whose enacting clause runs thus: "Be it enacted, that the bounties are and the same are hereby appropriated for the objects hereinafter expressed," &c.; and it is well understood here that the bounties are being held till after the elections, simply for political effect.

The Democrats in the Second Ohio Congressional District are preparing to colonize from Kentucky, in order to elect Pendleton. In defeatable districts everywhere, a gang sans he will be attempted. Let Union men be warned.

LARGE UNION MAJORITY.

THIRTY THOUSAND IS THE TUNE.

AUGUSTA, ME., September 13.—The Kennebec Journal of this morning has official returns from 324 cities, towns and plantations, which gave—Chamberlin, 61,215; Pilsbury, 35,922. Chamberlain's majority thus far is 25,293. The same towns last year gave Cony 46,782; Howard, 39,979, Cony's majority, 6,803. The net Union gain in these towns is 18,490. The aggregate vote is 97,137, against 78,761 last year; increase, 23,261. The remaining towns in the State gave Cony last year 7,645 votes, and Howard 4,690 votes. Estimating the vote of these towns relatively as we have they will give Chamberlain 9,566, and Pilsbury 6,176, and will make the aggregate majority 29,076. The Journal thinks the result will probably not fall far below this figure. If the aggregate vote in the remaining towns is increased, the poll will reach 118,272. Gen. Chamberlain has received the largest vote ever polled for any man in the State of Maine.

THE PROCESSION.

Delegations from the 32d and Tenth wards, and the Lawrenceville National Union Johnson Club.

The carriage which contained President Johnson was drawn by four horses, and was surrounded by a guard of firemen from the several companies. From somewhere the procession did not proceed to Allegheny City as was at first expected, but after the order had been formed in line, they moved from the Depot, down Liberty street to Wayne; along Wayne to Penn; down Penn to Cecil; along Cecil Court to Market; along Market to Fifth; up Fifth to Grant; down Grant to Fourth; down Fourth to Smithfield; down Smithfield to Water; along Water to Wood; up Wood to St. Charles Hotel.

The procession passed off in a very orderly manner, and we heard of no disturbance along the route. All along the route the distinguished party was greeted with cheering.

APPEARANCE OF THE CITY.

The excitement in the city became apparent about noon, and the old and young came flocking through the principal thoroughfares and pavilions to get a glimpse of the lions. Again, Fifth street seemed to take the lead in what there was displayed. The Custom House was gaily decorated with small flags and illuminated by a thousand gas burners. Where there was not room for flags were suspended from the windows of the Post, and Republic buildings. The Germania Journal, the Adams Express office and the Adams Express office were also decorated with flags. At the United States Assessor's office on Fourth street, a third story window, opposite flags and Chinese lanters were suspended from the window. Sawyer's soda store, on Wood street, was decorated with flags and illuminated with lanterns. There were illuminations in the buildings along the line of procession decorated with flags, and illuminated with lanterns.

STREAMERS, BANNERS, MOTTOES, &C.

A number of banners, stretchers, etc, with mottoes inscribed thereon, were displayed upon the principal thoroughfares of the city. A large streamer was suspended from Fifth street, from a telegraph pole to the Dispatch office, bearing the following inscription:

"My record. Treason must be made odious, and traitors punished. In the work of Reconstruction, traitors must take back seats. Andrew Johnson."

On the west side of the Custom House, on Fifth street, was suspended a banner bearing the following:

"We hail Andrew Johnson as President of the whole Union!"

"I leave with you the Union, the Constitution, and the Flag of my Country. I know they are safe."

From the the window of the United States Marshal's office, in the Custom House building, was suspended a banner, with these mottoes:

"Our whole country."—Right of way."

"Pennsylvania has always been for the Union."

A banner on the southwest side of the Custom House, on Smithfield street, bore these inscriptions:

"The people must be trusted!"

"What does treason mean? Ask the graves of the South, and what does he say of Butler."

A streamer was stretched from the Custom House over Fifth Street, on which was inscribed:

"Long live the Constitution and the President."

A streamer was stretched in front of the soap store of Lutz & Co., on Fifth street, facing Wood street, bearing this inscription: "The Administration must be sustained." On a streamer in front of Parker's auction store, Fifth street, was the following inscription: "Have you heard the news from Maine, the Northern end of the line?"

APPEARANCE OF THE ST. CHARLES HOTEL.

The entire facade of the St. Charles Hotel was handsomely decorated with Chinese lanterns and miniature American flags. The third street side of the building was similarly supplied. Directly over the main entrance on Wood street was the motto, "Our Whole Union," in gaslight letters. A large platform was erected in front of the hotel, commanding with the second floor of the building, and upon this the President and party were presented to the people. Flags and Chinese lanterns decorated the front of the platform, and at either end was a large gas lamp, bearing on its sides the names of Grant, Sherman, Sheridan and Meade, and Admiral Farragut, Porter, and others. The following inscriptions were painted on the front: "Our Navy, the Pride of the Ocean," and "All Honor to our Brave Soldiers." The stand was crowded with distinguished men from different and distant cities, who have joined the Presidential party on the route, and a large number of the prominent citizens of Pittsburgh and vicinity.

THE ARRAIVALS.

For nearly an hour before President Johnson arrived, a great many carriages containing the members of his party, and visitors from other places, drove up to the Hotel. The crowd was very dense and some difficulty was experienced in forcing a passage through it. As each carriage drove in the people gathered around it to catch a glimpse of its inmates. But they were each time disappointed, and turned away as soon as they made the discovery to wait for the next arrival. In the meantime the crowd augmented to hundreds, until the whole space in front of the hotel, extending as far in and down Wood street as Fourth, and First streets was filled.

ARRIVAL OF THE PROCESSION.

At precisely seven o'clock a shout was raised that the President was coming. All eyes were turned in the direction of Water street. At the head of the procession came a cavalcade of cavalry followed by a detachment of infantry. The crowd was ordered back and they obeyed with great reluctance. The soldiers, however, made a united effort, which pressed the crowd in on a compact mass and there they held it for several minutes, while President Johnson's carriage drove up to the Hotel. The carriage was no sooner espied than its distinguished occupant, accompanied by Secretary Welles and Hon. Robert McKnight, was surrounded by the people and heartily cheered. The soldiers again drove them back and President Johns n and the other gentlemen alighted and were at once escorted to room No. 91, facing Third street.

THE PROCESSION.

The procession then passed the hotel, during which President Johnson rested in his room awaiting the formation of the Reception Committee. The crowd kept surging to and fro like the waves of the sea, and once or twice broke in upon the military line, but the latter quickly restored themselves to position.

THE PRESIDENT APPEARS.

As soon as the procession passed, President Johnson was escorted to the platform by Hon. Robert M'Knight, followed by Secretary Welles, General Grant, Admiral Farragut, General Custar, General McCallum and several other officers of the army and navy.

THE RECEPTION.

As soon as President Johnson appeared before them, the people cheered him for several minutes, but the cheers were thickly interspersed with cheers for Grant and Farragut, and when the former came into full view, he comparatively restored, after the lapse of several minutes, and then the intellectual part of the proceedings commenced.

THE WELCOME.

Hon. Wilson McCandless, Judge of the United States District Court, was introduced to the populace by the Hon. Robert McKnight, when the crowd again cheered and again surged backward and forward, and mingled with its cheers and shouts a thousand demands for Grant and Farragut. Ex-Mayor Lowry appealed to the crowd to preserve order, and Mr. McKnight also tried the powers of persuasion, but in vain; still the wildest shouts and yells and cheers were sent up, and it seemed as if they would never grow weary. Judge McCandless waited with patience for a few minutes for order, and then said: Fellow Citizens: I am invited by Mr. McKnight, he addressed him as follows:

Mr. PRESIDENT—The Municipalities of Pittsburgh and Allegheny, disregarding the popular voice, have declined to invite you here. The people, without distinction of party, in town meeting assembled, have requested that I should tender to you the hospitalities of this city. In so doing I am but the humble instrument of the will of the people. Their workshop and metropolis. To you, personally, they tender the most generous hospitality, and to your high office, the homage of their profound regard. They honor you for the native talent, the keen sagacity, the unflinching and independent character, and the unbending patriotism you have always displayed in the past. They have elevated you to your high station, and now they are the observed of all the Nations of the earth. In their great civic festival, from the inception to the present, they found you encountering the madness of popular violence, risking personal danger, resisting the common enemy, and coming out to the stature of the Patriot, the Soldier, and the Statesman. They have not been unjust, nor with that self denial, you have been struggling to perpetuate the Union of these States, to maintain the integrity of the Constitution. Washington, the crowning glory of his career, and the proudest monument to his fame, arrived upon this spot, consecrated by his presence, and celebrated as the theater of his earliest achievements.

To you, General Grant, so calm, so quiet, so self possessed, yet, when the constitution and the Union are in danger, so positive and terrible, the first, the foremost, and the most heroic, with unparalleled modesty and with the force of attribution, "commanding obedience to the one, and assuring solidity to the other," it is difficult to find words adequate to convey around me, to extend to you the heartiest welcome.

To you, Admiral Farragut, the master spirit of the navy, who, through fire and blood, opened the mouth of the Mississippi, captured New Orleans, and lashed to the top-most of your flagship, with Pittsburgh guns, ascended to Memphis and the misguided people of the South, that this Government was one and indivisible, and that the Government of the United States must be obeyed, I am instructed to say, that you are the guest of the people.

To you, Mr. President, in the midst of a war of colossal proportions, created a year ago which has swept like a tornado over the land, I tender the kindest wishes of this community.

To Mr. Seward, who with the lamented and illustrious Lincoln, directed the helm of state wisely guided the foreign relations of the Government, and who has survived the knife of the assassin, and defeat the designs of rival and jealous nations, this surging mass of my fellow citizens, in their name, tender the hearty welcome of their hearts.

And to you, Mr. President, let me further say, that the people are inspired with one feeling, and but one, to see them out. If those eleven States were clamoring for admission, and were wanted to be annexed, would Pennsylvania hesitate in admitting those States as a part of the Confederacy? No, I think the Southern States were involved in any difficulty after the appearance of disloyalty, and the people rallying and becoming a part of us to live under the Constitution. No man it seemed that there should be any hesitation in the matter. The Union was one and the Union—every single effort of his life had been to restore the Union, and he had been alluded to in the beginning of the war as a traitor. It was but a short time when the people should embrace and forgive. It was said that Congress had all the power and the President none. Congress had not. The Department had restored the mails and reopened the channels of commerce and re-established the Union. The Union was the question, and it was the question of representation. Instead of taking the Union as it was, the President every individual interest before me to-night. Three cheers for Grant and Farragut, I am for the restoration of all the States. My policy—yes, my policy, is to restore the Union and bring about by means of reconciliation and concord between the American people, that fraternal feeling that existed with grooms, and voice, "can't see it." Let me suppose that these eleven States are lying off yonder, under the control of a foreign power, and suppose they make a proposition to us to return, but instead of twenty-six States of the Union, where is the man who will say that these eleven States shall not be united with the rest of the States of this Union, and become part of our confederacy? More cheers and groans. If we look to the South and to the Southwest we see this picture. I want an outlet for the commercial products of this land, and where is the man who will refuse.

Here the interruption became so great that the President was compelled to cease. The crowd kept up a continual shout for Johnson, Grant, Farragut, Custar and others, and after waiting some five minutes, the President called General Grant forward, and presented him. The General was received with deafening shouts of applause, but did not make any speech, although called upon to do so, and simply bowed in his acknowledgments and retired immediately. The President then waited a few minutes longer, and seeing that it was impossible to be heard, he said:

Fellow-citizens: As I cannot make myself heard on account of the pressure, you for this welcome and bid you good night.

The President was immediately escorted to his room by Secretary Welles and the remainder of the party.

THE BANQUET.

At half past nine o'clock the President and his party were conducted to the grand dining room, where a splendid banquet was prepared. The saloon was decorated with tri-colored bunting and flowers, and presented a very tasteful appearance. Two tables running the entire length of the room, each one hundred feet, were set on either side, and a table was placed across the room at the Third street end, where the President and his party, together with several other distinguished gentleman were seated. The bill of fare included all the delicacies of the season, besides a variety of wines and excellent brands of imported segars. The fish, ornamented dishes, entrees, relishes, roasts, game, vegetables, pastry, dessert, fruits, &c., all were prepared with the most unexceptionable taste and skill. To use an old expression, the tables fairly groaned beneath the weight of the solids and trifles crowded upon them. President Johnson was flanked on either side by Governor Curtin and Secretary Welles, and opposite him was Admiral Farragut. Judge McCandless occupied one end of the table, and Hon. H. A. Weaver the other. General McCalmum and others were seated on the opposite side. President Johnson, among the other guests we noticed Senator Cowan, Hon. John L. Dawson, W. F. Johnson, Collector of the port of Philadelphia, General Sweitzer, and many more. About one hundred and thirty gentlemen sat down to the feast, which continued until midnight, when the company responded to an invitation to repair to the balcony. The closed at the front, and asking all present to drink it deep and sincerely. The company responded in the affirmative, rising from the table and cheering heartily, rising from the table and cheering heartily, after which they retired.

President Johnson received the visits of several gentlemen after the banquet, but he retired early, feeling fatigued. General Grant remained before the banquet was over. Admiral Farragut and Secretary Welles were called upon by a party of gentlemen after the banquet, but retired to his apartment. By midnight all was comparatively quiet in and around the St. Charles.

SECRETARY SEWARD.

This distinguished gentleman continues ill, but he expresses his confidence in being well enough to-day to resume his place near the President. He was accompanied by his son and daughter, an accomplished young lady who has accompanied the excursionists since leaving Washington city.

The Presidential party will resume their journey this morning, arriving at Cleveland, which defeats the project entertained to have them present at the casting of a gun at the Fort Pitt Foundry. The overcoat worn the party left last night, at ten o'clock, to secure rooms at Harrisburg.

THE PRESIDENT IN CINCINNATI.

Comments of the Press—The Reception in Every way Creditable—Gen. Grant's Remarks at Wood's Theatre.

CINCINNATI, September 13—This evening's Times says the reception yesterday in this city was the most creditable of the whole tour. Mr. Groesbeck's welcome was by far superior to any other similar address, and Mr. Johnson's response was also more unhampered by indiscretions and interruptions. The Times says President Johnson stated publicly that he was very much pleased to see such perfect order prevail in the city, and personally complimented Chief of Police McLean on the almost perfect order which had been maintained.

The Commercial says the party passed from the Spencer House to the carriages waiting to convey them to the Gibson House, amid cheers towards the President were beyond description. Many persons warmly grasped the hands of the President with the exclamation of "God bless you, Mr. President; may you live to restore the Union, and establish peace and prosperity throughout the land." About fifty carriages, filled with the Committee on Reception and escort, formed in procession at Washington hall, and the Union—every single effort of his life had been to restore the Union, and he had been alluded to in the beginning of the war as a traitor. It was but a short time when the people should embrace and forgive. It was said that Congress had all the power and the President none. Congress had not. The Department had restored the mails and reopened the channels of commerce and re-established the Union. The Union was the question, and it was the question of representation. Instead of taking the Union as it was, the President every individual interest before me to-night. Three cheers for Grant and Farragut, I am for the restoration of all the States. My policy—yes, my policy, is to restore the Union and bring about by means of reconciliation and concord between the American people, that fraternal feeling that existed with grooms, and voice, "can't see it." Let me suppose that these eleven States are lying off yonder, under the control of a foreign power, and suppose they make a proposition to us to return. Instead of twenty-six States of the Union, where is the man who will say that these eleven States shall not be united with the rest of the States of this Union, and become part of our confederacy? More cheers and groans. If we look to the South and to the Southwest we see this picture. I want an outlet for the commercial products of this land, and where is the man who will refuse.

Here the interruption became so great that the President was compelled to cease. The crowd kept up a continual shout for Johnson, Grant, Farragut, Custar and others, and after waiting some five minutes, the President called General Grant forward, and presented him. The General was received with deafening shouts of applause, but did not make any speech, although called upon to do so, and simply bowed in his acknowledgments and retired immediately. The President then waited a few minutes longer, and seeing that it was impossible to be heard, he said:

Fellow-citizens: As I cannot make myself heard on account of the pressure, you for this welcome and bid you good night.

The President was immediately escorted to his room by Secretary Welles and the remainder of the party.

THE BANQUET.

At half past nine o'clock the President and his party were conducted to the grand dining room, where a sumptuous and elegant banquet was prepared. The saloon was decorated with tri-colored bunting and flowers, and presented a very tasteful appearance. Two tables running the entire length of the room, each one hundred feet, were set on either side, and a table was placed across the room at the Third street end, where the President and his party, together with several other distinguished gentleman were seated. The bill of fare included all the delicacies of the season, besides a variety of wines and excellent brands of imported segars. The fish, ornamented dishes, entrees, relishes, roasts, game, vegetables, pastry, dessert, fruits, &c., all were prepared with the most unexceptionable taste and skill. To use an old expression, the tables fairly groaned beneath the weight of the solids and trifles crowded upon them. President Johnson was flanked on either side by Governor Curtin and Secretary Welles, and opposite him was Admiral Farragut. Judge McCandless occupied one end of the table, and Hon. H. A. Weaver the other. General McCalmum and others were seated on the opposite side. President Johnson, among the other guests we noticed Senator Cowan, Hon. John L. Dawson, W. F. Johnson, Collector of the port of Philadelphia, General Sweitzer, and many more. About one hundred and thirty gentlemen sat down to the feast, which continued until midnight, when the company responded to an invitation to repair to the balcony. The closed at the front, and asking all present to drink it deep and sincerely. The company responded in the affirmative, rising from the table and cheering heartily, after which they retired.

President Johnson received the visits of several gentlemen after the banquet, but he retired early, feeling fatigued. General Grant remained before the banquet was over. Admiral Farragut and Secretary Welles were called upon by a party of gentlemen after the banquet, but retired to his apartment. By midnight all was comparatively quiet in and around the St. Charles.

About fifty carriages, filled with the Committee on Reception and escort, formed in procession at Washington hall, and another immense crowd was assembled, which warmly cheered the President and party.

The Commercial says the President has a resonant and far reaching voice, and seemingly not in the least impaired by his recent much speaking. His style is declamatory and exceedingly earnest, and any disjointedness that may be detected in reading his remarks was little observable in the earnestness of his declamation. The crowd that listened to his speech was evidently attracted by curiosity rather than enthusiasm or admiration for the President. It was an orderly, respectable and intelligent gathering, and there was manifested throughout the President's remarks a spirit of fairness and willingness to listen with respect to what he might be said. Following the display on the platform, there was a rush through the house of hundreds, who desired to take the President by the hand.

The commander of the Boys in Blue, in a card published to-day, gives the following version of the remarks made by General Grant at Wood's Theatre: "After being introduced, and taking me by the hand, he said: 'I am not a public speaker, President of the United States is my superior officer, and I am under his command. I beg of you, if you have any respect for me, to leave the theatre peaceably as I do not wish to be thus annoyed. I consider this a political demonstration for a selfish and political object, and all such I disapprove of. I am here to enjoy the performance, but I shall be glad to see you all to-morrow, at the Burnet House.'"

The Cholera.

NEW YORK, September 13—Twenty-seven cases of cholera were reported to-day, and only one in Brooklyn.

RICHMOND, VA., September 13—Five new cases of cholera were reported during the last twenty-four hours, two of which were fatal.

Significance of the Maine Election.

The Ground Swell Certain to Engulf Johnson, His Policy and all their Supporters.

[From the Herald of Wednesday.]

The general results of the Maine election are very decisive and very significant. They are startling and incomprehensible to the conservatives, and indicate a POPULAR GROUND-SWELL WHOLLY UNEXPECTED by the radicals themselves. It is manifest to us that this remarkable election turned more upon the exciting political events of the day, North and South, than upon the exact political issues presented between the Southern restoration policy of President Johnson and the reconstruction policy of Congress. Extraordinary results are generally due to extraordinary causes. Had the Republicans simply had something like their standing majority in Maine, the result could have been explained by the simple statement that the battle was fought between the Union party of the war and the old Copperhead peace Democracy. BUT THE ENORMOUS GAINS TO THE REPUBLICAN VOTE THROUGHOUT THE STATE REQUIRES A LARGER EXPLANATION.

We conclude that to the exciting political events of the day, and especially to the deplorable tragedy lately enacted in New Orleans, we must look for the exciting causes which have resulted in this UNPRECEDENTED DEFEAT of the Democrats and Conservatives in Maine. However gallly Northern abolition radicals may have been in fomenting the New Orleans riots, the fact stands forth in gloomy relief that Southern whites and negroes sympathizing with the Northern radical party were DELIBERATELY MURDERED by Southern desperadoes and municipal officers who had been notoriously active as SOUTHERN REBELS in the late rebellion. Gen. Sheridan's dispatches upon this bloody business have evidently left an impression upon the Northern mind prejudicial to the cause of the speedy reconciliation of the two sections. Those ruffianly elements of the South which had so much to do in precipitating the Southern States into the abyss of the late rebellion, against the wishes and movements of the great body of the Southern people, have been again at their diabolical work. And so we find the generous and acceptable restoration policy of the President turned into contempt by squads of Southern vagabonds, here and there

THE CAMPAIGN.

We can do no more than call the reader's attention to the report of meetings and speeches, in our columns this morning—a good antidote to the President's harangues. Especially will the speech made at Monongahela City, by R. B. CARNAHAN, Esq., in review of the President, command attention.

GLORIOUS MAINE!

The Boston Traveller prints the returns from Maine, and thereon remarks as follows: "That will do for one day's work, and the figures will be as terrifying to President JOHNSON as the mysterious handwriting was to BELSHAZZAR, when it conveyed a figurative warning to him that his reign was drawing to an end, and that the punishment he had brought upon himself was fast approaching."

THE N. Y. TIMES ADMITS THE REVOLUTIONARY PURPOSE OF THE PRESIDENT.

The COMMERCIAL a few days since addressed to the New York Times some questions in relation to the dangerous attitude which the President assumed toward Congress. The Times has replied in its latest issue,—crediting our article, however, to a cotemporary. Without repeating our questions, or going into all the details of the answer, which is less direct and more evasive than we could have wished, we discover that the Times entertains the same views that we do of the tendency to serious difficulties, growing out of the collision between two branches of the Government.

The point of the difficulty is this: that in case the President's party should succeed in electing 121 members, including all claiming membership from the late Secession States, and the Union party should elect 120, the President will recognize the former as the Congress, and exclude the latter from all recognition or acknowledgement. That is, the President will in fact treat the true Union men as traitors and usurpers, in accordance with the declarations that he has over and over made concerning them, and recognize the mixed and irresponsible body as the Congress of the United States, that shall lay itself at his feet, a large part of whom will be from the late Rebellious States. The Times agrees entirely with us, that such a usurpation of power by the President will be to the quietly submitted to by the people who have hitherto maintained the Union. And here, just at this point, is where the terrible war is to begin that has been so much talked of in the party press of Mr. JOHNSON in the North, and still more in the South.

The grand question is, how is this danger to be avoided? It is a serious question. We are fully conscious of its seriousness, and yet, solemn as it makes us feel, we cannot but indulge a smile as we read the Times' plan for averting the explosion. It is simply to let the President have his way, and Congress, Senate and Representatives, as well as all Union people, to be nobodies. Strip it or clothe it as you may, it is a proposition to make the peace of the country and the integrity of the Union turn on a universal surrender to the Executive will. The President has already entered on his mission for securing an obsequious Congress that will not oppose his will. The Times is engaged in the same work, and deliberately advises it as the only means of preventing the collision referred to with the President. The logical and political mistake of the Times—a mistake that embodies the dangerous conclusion which elates the President—is this, that it considers the President's opinion as a finality irresistible and unalterable, and deems it necessary, in order to escape disasters, that all other powers of government should succumb.

Now, our theory of safety to the Union, and our plan for evading any dangerous collisions of Congress with the Executive is, not to send to that body limber-kneed and weak-backed representatives, but intelligent, reliable, just, manly, peace loving and order-loving men, who will not encroach on the Executive prerogatives, nor submit to any Executive usurpation of authority over them. And, therefore, from the same data of danger through the action of the President, from which the Times argues for the election of an obsequious Congress to be mere tools of the Executive, we argue for the election, at the approaching polls, of firm, just Union men. By the former course, liberty is lost and revolution, already begun, will be accomplished; by the latter the Union will be saved, with liberty and honor, and the thirty-six States will be properly, legally and speedily placed in amity and operation together.

NEW YORK.

The nomination of HOFFMAN for Governor, by the Democrats, over GEARY, was the rejection of the plan whereon WEED and his compatriots expected to carry the State. It is known that the General was deemed by WEED & Co. the only card with which they could win. His military character, it was urged, would supply the needed element of success—without it there would be no prospect. We conclude that since HOFFMAN's nomination the FENTON stock must have advanced to a high figure.

IT is creditable that many Democrats utterly repudiate JOHNSON and his ways. The instances are not rare. On the contrary, hardly a man can be found who will indorse either him or his ways. He has drawn upon himself the eyes of all the people; he has compelled them to read his speeches and say what they think of them,—and it is a fact which no one will undertake to dispute, that the man who will stand up to defend, or excuse even, either him or them, is a bold man, reckless of his own reputation.

THE friendly correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger, in a dispatch from Washington, remarks significantly: "The President is looked for about Monday or Tuesday next, unless further changes are made in the programme, which is not likely. The Executive has been absent quite long enough." So far as Republicans are concerned they could well afford to keep him going till the elections are over.

ONE EXPLANATION.—All sorts of explanations of the result in Maine may be looked for from the vanquished. Here is one by the Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger. He says: "Private telegrams from Maine report that the Republican vote was swollen largely by persons who have heretofore cast their ballots the other way, but, in the Fenian interest, they this time gave them to the Republican party."

"SWINGING round the circle" is becoming a favorite exercise. Maine has done it,—in fact, it looks as though it had done it several times. Vermont did it a short time before; and Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, &c., &c., are going to do it. Let the President wait, and see if they don't.

GENERAL GRANT ACCEPTS AN INVITATION.—General GRANT has accepted the invitation extended to him to attend the meeting of the Army of Tennessee, in Cincinnati, on the 10th of November next.

GREAT GATHERINGS EVERYWHERE

THE GROUND SWELL.

THE ERIE MASS CONVENTION.

The Loyal Men of Northwestern Pennsylvania in Convention—An Imposing Demonstration—Eloquent Speeches—Great Enthusiasm.

Wednesday was a day long to be remembered by the patriotic citizens of Northwestern Pennsylvania—at least by those who were fortunate enough to get to the beautiful city of Erie, to view the grand procession and to hear the questions of the day logically and eloquently discussed by eminent speakers. What the demonstration would have been had not the weather threatened to be unpropitious for outdoor assembling, passeth our comprehension; for many who had commenced preparations for novel and suggestive displays, were compelled to forego them. Notwithstanding the unfavorableness of the weather, the loyal farmers and the patriotic citizens of Northwestern Pa. in the counties of Erie, Crawford, Mercer and Warren, came early into the city with their families, by every mode of conveyance. The ample rolling stock of that admirably conducted railway, the Erie and Pittsburgh was taxed to its utmost in carrying delegations, and the same may be said of the Philadelphia and Erie and the Lake Shore railroads. Such an outpouring of the loyal masses has never before been seen in that staunch Union stronghold, and notwithstanding the great crowd and the intense enthusiasm manifested everywhere and by everybody, not the slightest disturbance occurred to mar the perfect harmony of the occasion. The "my policy" men, and their compatriots, late of the Democratic party, "looked blue," and candidly admitted that in point of numbers the Union demonstration of Wednesday exceeded theirs by one half—and that, too, without any assistance from the Presidential traveling company.

As usual, was the prominent feature of the occasion. Delegations were present from every township and election district in Erie county, most of them bearing banners with appropriate inscriptions and devices. A notable feature in the procession, we were told, was the presence of several well known life long Democrats, who denounced the Presidential policy and were determined to support Congress. The display of the "Boys in Blue" was grand. They numbered upwards of fifteen hundred mounted men, organized into companies, and were commanded by men who knew how to set squadrons in battle. These heroes passed in review before Major General Geary, and were cheered, and as each company came up in front of these distinguished generals they halted, and stentorian cheers were given for Geary, Curtin and Congress, and three groans for Andy Johnson. A set of resolutions, all of which were seated seventy two young ladies, handsomely mounted in two splendid teams, and drawn by seventy-two bay horses, with bay riders. This demonstration was made by the young people of the borough of North-East, and excited much enthusiasm at every point on the route of the procession. The ladies were carried at intervals in the procession bearing the words "Congress shall be sustained," "My policy defunct," "What do you think of the news from Maine?" and kindred inscriptions. Another splendid display of beauty and fashion was made by one hundred and fifty maidens, dressed in white and blue, who rode in carriages, and bore aloft banners with appropriate

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—The Austrian correspondence states that the Sultan has given orders to the Turkish Ambassador at Vienna to obtain all the information possible relative to the maritime combat at Lissa, in order to arrive at the best estimate of the results obtained by the use of iron-clad vessels. Turkey, it may be well to state, possesses four frigates built and armed something in the manner of the Re d'Italie.

—Although the Elector of Hesse ought to have expected the late which has just befallen him the official news of the complete loss of his crown is said to have produced a most painful impression on his mind. Since the day he received it, his course of life has completely changed at Snettin; his walks have ceased, and he sees no one but his eldest daughter, the Princess d'Ysseuburg, who, as is known, has been with him since the commencement of his captivity.

—Until recently in the city of Luxembourg bodies were conveyed to the cemetery on men's shoulders. The municipality, recognizing the inconveniences of this mode, lately proposed the introduction of hearses. The Bishop of the town, however, objected to the innovation, not only in a religious point of view but financially, as it involved, he said, a fresh outlay for the population. The proposed measure was, however, adopted unanimously.

—Baron Haussmann has ordered diggings to be made in the court of the Paris Louvre, for the purpose of ascertaining the exact spot once occupied by the dungeon, in which the ordonnavika-walk construction in the reign of Philip augustus. The first volume of the Baron's topographic history of old Paris is out, and this information is required for the second volume.

—The chances of war bring about strange incongruities. The Duke of Nassau, so recently expelled from his State by Prussian troops, was not only, like the King of Hanover and Elector of Hesse, the proprietor of a Prussian Regiment, but he was moreover, a General of cavalry in the service of William the First. The day on which the confiscation of his Duchy was proclaimed he sent in his resignation. It appears that neither the King of Hanover nor the Elector of Hesse have followed his example, and that the former still flatters himself that he will be restored to his rights.

THE committee appointed in New Orleans to invite President Johnson to visit that city is headed by the rebel Mayor Monroe, the rebel General Buckner, the rebel Colonel Nixon, Pierre Soule, and other later day Southern loyalists. The rebels evidently appreciate President John son's services in their behalf.

THE LION AND THE LAMB.—In referring to the Christian exhortation of the Johnson men and the Democrats to let the lion and the lamb lie down together, General Logan says it would be all right if it were not the intention to let the lion lie down with the lamb in the inside of him.

ANOTHER UNION VICTORY.—At the charter election at Rising Sun, Indiana, a few days since, the Union ticket was elected by an average majority of seventy. The Democrats have usually carried the election there.

ANECDOTES AND INCIDENTS OF THE REBELLION:

Heroic, Patriotic, Romantic, Humorous and Tragical. Splendidly Illustrated with over 60 Original Portraits and Beautiful Engravings.

There is a certain portion of the war that will never go into the regular histories, and will not get embodied in romance or poetry, which is a very real part of it, and will if preserved, convey to succeeding generations a better idea of the spirit of the conflict than many dry reports of carefully illustrated of events, and this part may be called the gossip, the fun, the pathos, of the war.

These illustrate the character of the leaders, the manner of the soldiers, the devotion of women, the bravery of men, the pluck of our heroes, the romance and hardships of the service. From the immense fund of the war the author has been engaged in collecting all the anecdotes connected with or illustrative of the war, has grouped and classified them under appropriate heads, and in a very attractive form.

The volume is profusely illustrated with over 300 engravings by the first artists, which are really beautiful; worthy of examination as specimens of art. Many of them are set into the body of the text, after the popular style of Lossing's Pictorial Field Book of the Revolution. The book's contents include reminiscences of camp, field and hospital life, romance, siege and battlefield adventures; thrilling feats of bravery, wit, drollery, comical and ludicrous adventures, etc., etc.

Amusement as well as instruction may be found in every page, as graphical, brilliant, vivid and authentic history, are skillfully interwoven in this work of literary art.

This work sells itself. The people are tired of dry details and jarring words. They want something humorous, romantic and startling. We have agents making over $200 per month. Send for circulars and see our terms and proof of the above assertion. Address

On motion, a committee of five were appointed on permanent organization to report at the next meeting.

Stirring addresses were then delivered by Gen. Alfred L. Pearson, of Lawrenceville, and Wm. R. Ford, Esq., of the Ninth ward, Pittsburgh.

A roll for the signatures of those desiring to become members of the organization was then made out. About seventy-five signatures were attached during the evening.

The meeting then adjourned until Wednesday evening next, when the Liberty and adjoining townships "Boys in Blue," the Ninth Ward Geary Club, the second Ward Geary Gee Club, and other organizations will be present, and a grand demonstration will take place.

Pittsburgh Soldiers' National Convention.

In our advertising columns to day will be found the call of the Resident Committee of the Soldiers and Sailors National Association, for the great National Convention to take place in this city on Tuesday, 25th inst. The Convention will consist of honorably discharged soldiers and sailors who fought in the late war for the Federal Union. A number of distinguished military gentlemen have announced themselves to be present and speak at the Convention, among whom are Major Generals Butler, Banks, Logan, Chamberlain, Schenck, Garfield and Burnside. The Convention promises to be one of the largest that was ever held on this continent, and veterans from every part of the Union will be present, and will crowd our city to overflowing. We would suggest that the Committee appointed to secure what accommodation could be furnished by the citizens to the heroes during their stay here, attend to the matter and report at once as time is short, and a matter of great importance, and should be attended to immediately, as the result is looked for with a great interest by those residing abroad and who desire attending the Convention.

Criminal Court.

The Criminal Court met yesterday morning morning at the usual hour, when the following cases were disposed of:

The case of the Commonwealth vs. Wm. Orle, sr., Wm. Orle, jr., and Lucy Orle, indicted for committing an aggravated assault and battery upon Henry Gray, was resumed, and occupied the attention of the court during the greater part of the day. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, ordering each party to pay one half the costs, and each party entered into recognizances in the sum of five hundred dollars to keep the peace.

The jury in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Henry Gray, indicted for committing an aggravated assault and battery upon William Orle, returned a similar verdict.

Thomas Donnelly and Ellen Scandlin, were placed upon trial upon an indictment for larceny, on oath of Sarah Riley. The prosecutrix alleges that on the 17th of July last, the defendants stole three pigs, valued at thirty-five dollars, belonging to her. The parties both reside in Allegheny. Jury out.

Court then adjourned until this morning.

OUR NATIONAL GAME.

A NOTED CLERGYMAN AND PUBLIC LECTURER says of "Brown's Bronchial Troches:" "In all my lecturing tours, I put Troches into my carpet bag as regularly as I do lectures or linen." Public speakers, vocalists, and all others who exercise the voice, should never fail of using the Troches, they surpass all other preparations in clearing and strengthening the voice, removing hoarseness, allaying irritation of the throat, and as a cough remedy are unsurpassed by the best. FINANCE AND TRADE.

THURSDAY, September 13—P. M.

Quotations from the New York gold and stock boards at noon to-day show a decline in the whole list as compared with yesterday's, Gold, 145¾; Eighty-ones, 111; old Five Twenties, 109¾; new ditto, 106½; Ten-forties, 99; Seven-thirties, 106⅞—the first, second and third series sell at the same price. Michigan Southern, 82¾; Cleveland and Pittsburgh, 82½; Fort Wayne, 104½; Erie, 71½; Chicago and Northwestern (common, 80¾; preferred, 91; Rensselaer, 69; Gregory gold, 17½; Holman, 45c bid.

The "bulls" of the gold market are likely to be saddled with a pretty heavy load of coin in keeping up the premium. The shipment of gold from the other side by the steamer Java on Saturday is telegraphed as $1,750,000, in place of $1,060,000, as reported on Saturday. The City of Boston arrived at New York on Sunday with $200,000, and the Hermann on Monday with $810,000. The other arrival due at Boston by the China this week amounts to $750,000. The price of gold is nearly steady, notwithstanding the English and Continental arrivals. The speculators for the rise, however, feel less confident than they did last week. Their only safe calculation is on the temporary scarcity of cash gold to meet the daily customs demand and to fulfil maturing short contracts.

—The local market was devoid of any transactions in stocks worthy of special notice. Scarcely bids for Allegheny National Bank stock were made, but the low for the holders, who want 60. Columbia oil is wanted at 17, but no sellers, and 17 was bid for Allegheny Valley Railroad stock without bringing it out, which is held at 20, and no large lots would be sold even at that figure. Pittsburgh 5's sold yesterday in Philadelphia at 75.
